

WILSON CURRENCY PLAN NOW READY FOR CONGRESS

President Tells The Evening World Correspondent It Is a Harmony Measure.

UNITES ALL INTERESTS.

Declares That Within Forty-eight Hours the Bill Will Be Completed.

By Samuel M. Williams.
Chief Correspondent of The Evening World.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—President Wilson is endeavoring to play the role of the "Great Harmonizer" of political and financial interests and to bring about banking and currency legislation.

He had a long talk with the President this morning in the White House offices. Outside there was burning heat, but the offices were cool and the President was even cooler. His calm placidity did not permit of a single drop of perspiration on his brow, not the slightest twitch to his collar.

Some persons are unkind enough to say that he is cold-blooded in both physical and mental characteristics. Certainly it is that Washington's tropical heat fails to ruffle him in the least—a striking contrast to his predecessor. This is why Mr. Wilson explained to the readers of The Evening World what he is trying to do in this currency situation. He said, among a large number of men with whom he has consulted, a harmony of purpose, but not a harmony of opinion as to how to bring about certain changes in laws affecting banking and currency all agree that present system was not adequate and that some improvement was necessary.

HE CLEARLY DEFINED LIKE THE TARIFF QUESTION.

The question was not a clearly defined one. The tariff, in that respect, there were the explicit directions of the Democratic platform and the demands of the country as expressed at the polls to bring about a revision and reduction of the tariff. It was plain sailing toward a definite point with the answer all directed out, but regarding currency legislation it is very different. Between there, there are no clearly defined lines of procedure laid down in party platform or by the public.

In fact, currency reform is not a party question at all. When this view of the situation, the President felt that his duty was to feel his way along—bringing together the experts, each with his specialty or idea upon some particular group. In short, to endeavor to crystallize all the shades of opinion into one concrete proposition that could be formulated into law.

He was not trying to promulgate any theory of his own either on the Democratic party or the country. In short, he had no preconceived ideas nor did he consider himself an expert upon the involved questions.

And here is where the President applied that wonderful tact and infinite common sense which he possesses to bring men together and get them to think gradually along the same line. There have been many informal conferences and much correspondence with all manner and conditions of men—professors of economics, monetary experts, Congressional leaders, bankers, and business men. Letters from many men who could not come to Washington have been received and from them the President learned that there is an almost hope expressed by the financial and commercial interests of the country that remedial legislation can be enacted soon. The demand is second in the urgency only to the nation-wide confidence for quick passage of the tariff bill.

Out of all this patient and almost blooded procedure there is evolving something concrete.

EXPECTS TO HARMONIZE ALL THE ELEMENTS AT ONCE.

The President said to me this morning that within forty-eight hours he expected that there would be brought about a harmonizing of all elements and all opinions that would crystallize into a single bill to be presented to Congress. It will not be a Wilson bill nor an Administration bill, nor merely a Democratic bill. He hopes that it will meet with the approval of many Republicans as well as many Democrats.

The President said that he would not attempt to outline its main principles, because it would be made public in concrete and final form within a few days. Besides, the crystal is not yet completely formed, although the congealing process is working rapidly.

Mr. Wilson completed yesterday the message on the subject that he intends sending to Congress some day this week. He said with a smile of dry humor that while the first draft had been made he had "put it to soak" for a few days to see how it would come out. He is expected to read it at a joint session as he did his tariff message.

BRASILIAN MINISTER COMING.

'UNKISSED,' SAYS WIFE, MOTHER OF TWO BABES WITHIN THREE YEARS

"Cruelty" Also Consists in Not Living Always in Luxury of Bridal Tour.

Opposing the award of $250 a month alimony in a separation case in which he represents the husband-defendant, former Magistrate Wahle, before Supreme Court Justice Goff, to-day laid stress upon what he termed a serious mistake common among bridegrooms. This is their custom of taking their brides to fashionable resorts to spend the honeymoon amid hotel surroundings of elegance that they are not likely to enjoy again in their lives.

It was in the case of the good-looking wife of Hugo Greenberger, a Harlem merchant, who alleges her husband is cruel because he has not kissed her during the three years of their married life. Justice Goff reserved declaration on her application for alimony.

The cause of the marital infelicity in the Greenberger home, said Mr. Wahle, began when the middle-aged merchant "took his wife, then a young stenographer, out of a Harlem tenement." On their honeymoon they visited Palm Beach and other fashionable resorts, and dined by the magnificence of the hotels at which they stopped. Mrs. Greenberger expected the same luxury ever afterward. Her husband is not wealthy, said his counsel.

"Two children have blessed this union," declared the lawyer, "yet she alleges her husband has never kissed her. She has had two children in three years. She ought to be led by her ear back to her babies!"

Other charges against Greenberger were that he had been physically abusive, striking his wife on several occasions with his fist. He sometimes came home intoxicated, her counsel also declared.

The Greenbergers formerly lived in the Klerke Apartments, No. 60 West One Hundred and Forty-first street. Boy Accused as Thief.
Howard Senescu, fifteen, of No. 419 West One Hundred and Twenty-first street, is a prisoner at the Children's Society charged with juvenile delinquency. It is said by his parents that he left home about a week ago. The police say he returned yesterday while his parents were away and stole a gold watch and locket from their apartment, the property of Miss Genevieve Lawrence, a social worker. He was arrested by Detective Daly.

BUCKNER TELLS CHURCHES WALDO IS RESPONSIBLE.

Commissioner, Not Mayor, He Says, to Blame for Conditions.

In addressing the Federation of Churches at No. 1 Madison avenue this morning, Emory R. Buckner, counsel to the Currency Committee, said in part: "We have been waiting in vain for some of our critics to meet our evidence with their evidence—if they have any. The only answer we can secure to our sworn facts is the charge of 'politics.' Is it 'politics' for us to let you know what the records shamelessly disclose—that the Commissioner has permitted nearly three hundred police officers accused of grafting to investigate themselves?"

"Is it 'politics' for us to tell you that the Police Commissioner was warned that Becker was grafting under his very nose, and that warning came from such men as Commissioner of Accounts Raymond B. Fossick and Chief Magistrate William McAdoo?" "Many say 'Yes, you have proved all your statements,' Commissioner Waldo is incompetent and guilty of maladministration, but you should not have recommended his removal. That looks like 'politics.' What would they have us do with an admittedly incompetent commissioner? Present him with an engrossed set of resolutions or a new automobile?" "Others say, 'But Commissioner Waldo is only the Mayor's man Friday. You should have held the Mayor responsible.' Our answer is that this investigation has been founded upon facts and not upon politics, theories, or suppositions. Our indictment against the police commissioner consists of twelve counts, each sufficient for his removal. There is no evidence before us, which shows that the Mayor had specific knowledge of these twelve classes of acts."
